

REENTRY TO CIVILIAN LIFE LIFE AFTER INCARCERATION

THURSDAY, MARCH 31st - 7PM - SMPA 309

The GW Student Alliance for Prison Reform (SAPR) is excited to host a panel discussion on the realities of life after prison in the United States. This panel will dive into the real-life ramifications of serving time in America and what role prisons and correctional programs need to play in prisoner reentry to civilian life. Our featured experts will discuss the emotional, political, and fiscal tolls of the often messy transition for formerly incarcerated people into civilian life. This panel will offer insight for any student interested in the need for prison reform, the role of the government and private sectors in reform, and the implications of the current and potential future of prisons in America. SAPR is proud to bring this panel to campus free of charge for all students and community members.

FEATURED LECTURERS

PROFESSOR FRAN BUNTMAN, PH.D

Professor Fran Buntman's primary teaching and research interests focus on prisons and other institutions of punishment and 'correction', law and power, and inequality, especially in the U.S. and South Africa. She is interested both in open and hidden expressions of power and resistance, and how social institutions tell us a great deal about our social values and commitments. Committed to public sociology, she contributes to public debate, including speaking on WAMU's Kojo Nnamdi Show and for other news outlets, and through the Folger Shakespeare Library, Theater J, and GW's National Civil War Project Conference.

YAVAR MOGHIMI, M.D.

Dr. Yavar Moghimi is GW School of Medicine graduate and professional psychiatrist currently practicing in Washington, D.C. While at GW, Dr. Moghimi directed and produced Released to Life, a short documentary about the struggle of several D.C.-area sex-offenders who struggle to reenter society after being released from prison. His film was awarded the prestigious "Washington's Best Film" award in 2012.

GW STUDENT ALLIANCE FOR PRISON REFORM
PETEY GREENE GW

